

TWO YEARS' TRAINING FOR MISSOURI CADETS

Application as Unit of Reserve Officers' Corps Is Made.

HAVE ALTERNATIVE

Would Make Those Exempt Not Desiring to Take the Full Term.

Two years of military training will be required of University students instead of one if the cadet corps of the University of Missouri becomes a unit of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, established by the National Defense Act of June 3, 1916. An application for admission to the corps is now under consideration by the University authorities.

"At present 233 students are enrolled for the years' training though state appointments which carry this provision," said Major Charles W. Castle, Professor of Military Science and Tactics in the University. "These could be admitted into units of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps with practically no change in their standing."

According to Major Castle, the serious question to be considered is the matter of making two years' training compulsory, instead of one year. This would be necessary if the entire body of cadets is to form part of the corps. An alternative, however, would be to form two separate battalions, those forming part of the reserve training corps comprising one battalion and the students taking the required one year of training, forming the other. In this way the students not desiring to take the two years' training would be exempt.

The entrance of the cadet corps into the reserve training corps would result in the limiting of officers and non-commissioned officers to juniors, seniors and postgraduates, so far as possible. Heretofore freshmen and sophomores with previous military training have been given the preference over juniors and seniors with less experience.

The third and fourth years of University military training, under the reserve corps plans, will constitute an advanced course. Those eligible to take the advanced course will be selected, after they have had the first two years' training, by the President of the University and the Professor of Military Science. Five hours' work a week will be required of those taking the advanced course. In return for this time and effort the United States government will pay each advanced student $9 a month.

The ultimate aim of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps is to develop men in civil life who may be called upon in time of war to lead and organize new forces. Students graduating from the training corps enter the Officers' Reserve Corps, which consists of men in civil life who are qualified for service as commissioned officers.

Students who graduate from the military course into the Officers' Reserve Corps may be appointed by the President as temporary second lieutenants in the regular army. They will be attached to organizations of the army for six months, receiving the allowances provided by law, and pay of $100 a month during their service.

vice. Upon the expiration of such service, they revert to their status as reserve officers, returning to civil life.

The reserve training corps plan calls for the furnishing of equipment by the government. An officer of the army will be appointed by the Secretary of War to each university maintaining a reserve training corps. This officer will act as quartermaster, disbursing and accounting for the equipment and funds allotted to the institution by the government. The plan is also to detail one sergeant from the regular army for each 100 students enrolled in the corps, to assist in the work of training the men. At least 100 men must be enrolled in a corps before it can become a unit in the reserve training corps.

"Attention should be called to the increasing demand throughout the country for teachers of high school grade who are able to give military instruction," said Major Castle. "The opportunity afforded students taking teachers' courses to fit themselves for this new branch of work cannot be underestimated, since the demand for military training in high schools is growing stronger each day."

NEWS and COMMENT

Expect Record Crowd at Thanksgiving Game.

Indications point to a record crowd when the Tigers and the Jayhawkers meet at Lawrence Thanksgiving Day, says the Kansas City Star. W. O. Hamilton, manager of athletics at K. U., said Saturday night that he already had received requests for more than five thousand tickets. Manager Hamilton announced that tickets will be placed on sale in Lawrence and Kansas City tomorrow.

The prices for the annual game will be the same as last year. Bleacher seats will cost $2 and box seats $2.50. Manager Hamilton announced that until Wednesday mail orders will be given the preference, the requests being filed and filled in the order in which they are received, providing requests are accompanied by the price of the tickets and an additional twelve cents to cover cost of registering return letter.

Missouri will be given the north side of McCook Field and Kansas the south side. The Missouri seats will be sent to C. L. Brewer. Mr. Brewer will make arrangements for the Missouri alumni in Kansas City to procure seats in the Missouri section.

The Kansas management will be prepared to seat fifteen thousand persons at the game and Manager Hamilton says there will be no delay in entering the field. There will be seven-teen entrances. No cars will be admitted to the field, but the K. U. authorities will make adequate arrangements for the parking of cars just outside of the playing field and the parking arrangements will be in the hands of responsible men. Manager Hamilton expects a great crowd of motorists from Kansas City and from all through Kansas and will devote special attention to seeing that cars are quickly parked and well cared for.

A new plan in regard to selling tickets will be used again this year. Blocks of seats, as many as requested, are being sold to the fraternities and other organizations of the two universities, the purchasing body paying for the seats at the time they are turned over. Then the frats or whatever the organizations may be, dispose of the tickets as they see fit.

"This method serves to bring congenial crowds together, making the spirit better, the rivalry finer and the whole tone of the great throng better," Hamilton declares.

Giltner and Wilder Are Ready to Play.

Mike Giltner and Wentworth Wilder, two Tigers on the list of cripples, are improving rapidly. Wilder had the bandage off his nose today and it was also found that his rib was not broken as was thought at first. Giltner, instead of having a broken hand, has a badly bunged up thumb. Giltner's injury is likely to handicap him a little next Saturday, but Wilder will be in perfect condition unless he is injured again.

The basketball squad played its first scrimmage, last night. On the first squad Williams played center; Willets, Campbell and Shirky, forwards; Shepard and Church, guards. Thirty men are on the squad.
